

[DATABASE COMPONENT PACKET MANAGER]

Abstract

A component packet manager for a computer-based database processing system containing a database consists of a number of other components, including one or more user applications and an application interface which communicates data to and from each user application. An entity manager communicates data to and from the application interface, while a constraint manager communicates data to and from the application interface.